ABOUT GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

Georgetown University is one of the world’s leading academic and research institutions, offering a unique educational experience that prepares the next generation of global citizens to lead and make a difference in the world. We are a vibrant community of exceptional students, faculty, alumni and professionals dedicated to real-world applications of our research, scholarship, faith and service.

Established in 1789, Georgetown is the oldest Catholic and Jesuit university in the United States. Drawing upon the 450-year-old legacy of Jesuit education, we provide students with a world-class learning experience focused on educating the whole person through exposure to different faiths, cultures and beliefs. Students are challenged to engage in the world and become men and women in the service of others, especially the most vulnerable and disadvantaged members of the community.

These values are at the core of Georgetown’s identity, binding members of the community across diverse backgrounds.
Dear Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of Georgetown University, I wish to extend my warmest welcome to all of our guests participating in this weekend’s conference. It our great pleasure to have each of you to our campus for the 13th annual Human Development and Capability Association Conference, on the theme “Capabilities on the Move: Mobility and Aspirations.” I wish to thank you for taking the time to engage with other scholars, practitioners, leaders and students on new ideas related to the study and practice of human development across the world.

We are deeply honored to be hosting this conference here in Washington and wish to thank Dr. Henry S. Richardson, Professor of Philosophy, who also serves as President of the HDCA, for his leadership and exceptional vision in convening these conversations on our campus.

As a university, Georgetown has a long history of engagement with the study and practice of human development. A distinctive approach, deeply rooted in our Catholic and Jesuit tradition and beginning with the conviction that every human life possesses an inherent dignity, characterizes all of our work. To deepen this commitment, in recent years we launched three new graduate programs focused on human development. Through our Master’s Program in Global Human Development at our School of Foreign Service, our Master in International Development Policy at our McCourt School of Public Policy, and our Master of Science in Global Health in our Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, we are strengthening our efforts to prepare students to be thoughtful leaders who promote human flourishing in the fullest sense.

Over the next days, we will engage with new scholarship, new people and new perspectives. We will celebrate the capabilities approach and call each other to think, in ever-deeper ways, about the contributions that we can make as scholars, practitioners and leaders committed to recognizing the gifts and potential of all human beings. I wish to thank you for being here for this important work. Georgetown is honored to be a part of the extraordinary conversations ahead.

I hope you enjoy your time on our campus, and I wish you all the very best for a terrific conference.

Sincerely,

John J. DeGioia

President, Georgetown University
ABOUT THE HUMAN DEVELOPMENT & CAPABILITY ASSOCIATION

The Human Development and Capability Association is a global community of academics and practitioners that seeks to build an intellectual community around the ideas of human development and the capability approach, and relate these ideas to the policy arena. The association promotes research within many disciplines, ranging from economics to philosophy, development studies, health, education, law, government, sociology, and more. While primarily an academic body, the Association shall bring together those primarily involved in academic work with practitioners who are involved in, or interested in, the application of research from the fields of human development and capability to the problems they face. Our members live in over 70 countries worldwide.

The United Nations Development Program's 20th anniversary Human Development Report (2010, p.2) defines human development as “the expansion of people's freedoms to live long, healthy and creative lives; to advance other goals they have reason to value; and to engage actively in shaping development equitably and sustainably on a shared planet. People are both the beneficiaries and the drivers of human development, as individuals and in groups.” This influential conception of human development drew from the work of Amartya Sen and others on the Capability Approach, which “concentrates on the capabilities of people to do things—and the freedom to live lives—that they have reason to value” (Sen, Development as Freedom, 1999, p. 85). Sen emphasized both the importance of having the capability to live in valuable ways and the value of agency—of shaping one's own life and influencing one's broader surroundings. The focus on capabilities has suggests new ways of evaluating socio-economic progress. Some have offered concrete accounts of the central human capabilities—Martha Nussbaum's is the most influential. She argues that “Our world is not a decent and minimally just world unless we have secured the ten [central] capabilities, up to an appropriate threshold level, to all the world's people” (Nussbaum, Frontiers of Justice, 2006, p. 70).

The HDCA's main activities include holding an annual international conference such as the present one, facilitating a range of thematic groups, and publishing the quarterly Journal of Human Development and Capabilities, a peer-reviewed academic journal published by Taylor & Francis.

Launched in 2004, the HDCA has over the years been led by a number of presidents, who have come from different scholarly disciplines:

• Amartya K. Sen (2004 – 2006) | economics
• Martha C. Nussbaum (2006 – 2008) | philosophy
• Frances Stewart (2008 – 2010) | development studies
• Kaushik Basu (2010 – 2012) | economics
• Tony Atkinson (2012 – 2014) | economics
• Henry S. Richardson (2014 – 2016) | philosophy
September 10, 2015

Dear fellow conference participants,

Welcome to the 13th annual conference of the Human Development and Capability Association. We at Georgetown University are honored and excited to be hosting a large and diverse group of you for this meeting. Many of you have come from far away: over four hundred people from almost fifty countries have registered for this conference. Now that you are here, we aspire to stimulate you, to help you build new intellectual and personal connections, and to open up for you dimensions of thought and practice for your future explorations.

The conference’s offerings display a tremendous variety of work on human development and capabilities. They explore all aspects of the conference theme, not only in their distinctness—looking at intra-urban, intra-national, and international mobility from place to place; at economic and social mobility; and at the aspirations of individuals and groups of many kinds—but also in their interconnections. In addition, there are papers reflecting each of the fifteen subjects on which association members have organized Thematic Groups—and more besides. Each of you will find plenty of presentations that fit your specific interests. I urge you, though, also to sample a wide range of presentations that lie outside your area. For me, the most illuminating moments of HDCA conferences have come from hearing papers in breakout sessions on topics that are totally new to me.

On behalf of the association, I am pleased to thank our contributing sponsors, Routledge/Taylor & Francis Group and the Human Development Report Office of the United Nations Development Programme. I would also like to express the association’s deepest gratitude to Georgetown University for its unstinting generosity in hosting this meeting and in particular to its president, John J. DeGioia, whose passion for global justice and global human development, which has shown itself in many other ways, stands behind this effort.

Wishing you a wonderful conference,

Henry S. Richardson

2015 KUKLYS PRIZE FOR THE BEST CONFERENCE PAPER BY A GRADUATE STUDENT

The Kuklys prize is annually awarded at the HDCA conference for the best conference paper from a graduate student. It is aimed at promoting the work of graduate students in the field of human development and the capability approach. It is named in memory of Wiebke Kuklys, who, as an Economics PhD student at Cambridge University, advanced the capability approach by exploring the application of new statistical techniques. Wiebke studied in Germany, Chile, and England, and combined an open mind for new ideas with a concern for the most vulnerable people and she believed that high-quality research could contribute to making the world a better place to live in. Wiebke died in June 2005, at the age of 33, only a few months after receiving her PhD degree. Her dissertation was published posthumously by Springer under the title Amartya Sen's Capability Approach: Theoretical Insights and Empirical Applications. The prize will be awarded at the Closing Ceremonies.

CAPABILITIES ON THE MOVE: MOBILITY AND ASPIRATIONS

Human development has in large part been a story of mobility. Geographically, people move to seek a better job or a better life, and when they succeed, they move up the socioeconomic ladder, whether as assessed by income or by capabilities. People's aspirations fuel these efforts; yet aspirations can be quashed by poverty, inequality, or social exclusion. Mobility can also pose challenges to human development, ranging from overcrowded cities to widening inequality, as some get left behind. Examining how mobility and aspirations interact provides an important window on the dynamics of human development.

Upward mobility is a dynamic counterpart of equality, offering the possibility that those born in poverty might escape it. Support for basic capabilities, especially in the areas of health and education, is essential to enabling such upward mobility. How do the aspirations of the poor and vulnerable figure into this process? How can their success in meeting them begin to match that of the rich and powerful? Long-entrenched cultural barriers often inhibit social and economic mobility and put in place a kind of social distance. This can make it hard for highly trained professionals, such as doctors, to work effectively with the poor and less educated. How can these barriers be overcome? And how can those who are relatively deprived and excluded be adequately protected against downward mobility resulting from inadequate social policies, war, ill health, educational deprivation, or even climate change?

How can the ideals of human development adequately reach the world's millions of refugees? Such evils and misfortunes spur much of the world's geographic mobility. Among those forced to flee epidemics, economic crises, natural disasters, and human conflicts, the poor and vulnerable are disproportionately represented. How can the ideals of human development adequately reach the world's millions of refugees? And as another billion of the world's poor migrate voluntarily to cities, or to other countries, aspiring to improve their lot, how can their human development be adequately addressed? All around the world, migration to cities is putting huge strains on the infrastructure that is meant to provide sanitation, transportation, health, education, and personal safety, thus threatening basic capabilities even while holding out hope for them.
People’s aspirations, which can drive them to move, can be a powerful engine of development. Whether individuals’, families’, or communities’ pursuit of their aspirations translates into improvements in their capabilities and functionings, however, is a further question. Understanding people’s aspirations, and their capabilities to aspire, is crucial to understanding poverty and human development. Do we know how to encourage aspirations without setting people up for frustration? Where people’s aspirations are stunted by lack of opportunities, development will languish; but where people’s aspirations are frustrated by barriers to education or employment or needed health care, apathy and resentment may set in.

Importantly, people aspire to agency as well as to well-being. They seek an end to local oppressions. They seek democracy and liberty for their own nations, and a real voice for those nations in international forums. How can these agential aspirations—these political aspirations—be harnessed to promoting human development? At a more theoretical level, aspirations deserve study also because they represent a deeper layer of human psychology than is ordinarily captured by preference-based models.

The theme of mobility and aspirations, then, will provide an enriching way to focus on capability enhancement over time, one that will deepen the social, political, and psychological richness of the capability approach.

HOW DO ASPIRATIONS MATTER?
Caroline Hart, Lecturer in Education Studies, School of Education, University of Sheffield

How do aspirations matter? The paper explores this question, drawing on both theoretical and empirical work in relation to key concepts within the capability approach. The concept of an aspiration set is introduced and a distinction is made between the capability to aspire and the functioning of aspiring. Potential dissonance between aspiration and tranquility is reflected upon in terms of individual lives and the development of societies. Key to the discussion is the dilemma of feasibility of aspirations, how feasibility may be determined, and who may judge it.

Using the example of aspirations and higher education, empirical data illustrate the shifting loci of control in relation to aspirations, their evolution and transformation. The emotional risk inherent in aspiration at the individual level is juxtaposed with policy discourses that act to constrict and shape aspirations and the capability to aspire. In concluding the paper, a call is made to reclaim a rich idea of aspiration for human development.

ASPIRATION AND THE CAPABILITIES LIST
Martha C. Nussbaum, Distinguished Service Professor of Law and Ethics, University of Chicago

The list of Central Human Capabilities that plays a key part in my approach to fundamental political principles is clearly aspirational: its demands are hard to meet, and no nation in the world fully meets them. I have also argued that, although the capabilities threshold ought to be set with sensitivity to resources and possibilities, it should be set, nonetheless, in an aspirational though not impossible way. This commitment to an element of idealization in my version of the Capabilities Approach appears to conflict with Amartya Sen’s insistence on benchmarks that are comparative only. I will argue, against one possible reading of Sen, that we need norms to strive for that are human, in principle attainable, but tough and demanding; and we need to say not simply, “X is better than Y,” but also, “Without X there is no basic justice,” “X is something that all human beings have an inalienable right to demand.” (This is one of the many ways in which my approach dovetails closely with constitutional law.) I will investigate the apparent disagreement between Sen and me, at the same time asking which aspects of the capabilities list are relatively fixed over time and context and which aspects ought to be specified in a more implicitly comparative manner, taking current possibilities into account.

HOW INDIVIDUAL ASPIRATIONS SHAPE ECONOMIC BEHAVIOR
Debraj Ray, Silver Professor and Professor of Economics, New York University

This talk will address the implications of a theory of economic behavior based on individual aspirations. In the theory I describe, aspirations are psychological milestones or goals that affect the incentives of individuals to save, invest or bequeath. These individual outcomes determine economy-wide characteristics such as the overall distribution of income or wealth. In turn, social outcomes are a fundamental determinant of individual aspirations. Thus social and individual outcomes evolve together, and the resulting social trajectories can profoundly depend on distant histories.

This approach permits the study of several phenomena. Here are four examples: 1. Higher aspirations can inspire, generating high investment, while still higher aspirations can serve to frustrate, dampening investment. 2. Two societies with the same “fundamentals” can display widely different wealth distributions, one that becomes ever-more unequal and the other generating equitable outcomes. 3. Rapid economic growth can lead to social conflict. 4. Polarized societies are likely to display limited mobility over time.

CREATING FLOURISHING LIVES: THE DYNAMICS OF CAPABILITY FORMATION
This lecture presents recent research on the economics of creating flourishing lives. The implications of this research for the design of effective policies are discussed.

James Heckman, PhD, University of Chicago
Dr. Heckman serves as the Henry Schultz Distinguished Service Professor of Economics at the University of Chicago. He has devoted his professional life to understanding the origins of major social and economic problems related to inequality, social mobility, discrimination, skill formation and regulation, and to devising and evaluating alternative strategies for addressing those problems. His recent interdisciplinary research on human development and skill formation over the life cycle draws on economics, psychology, genetics, epidemiology, and neuroscience to examine the origins of inequality, the determinants of social mobility, and the links among stages of the life cycle, starting in the womb. Dr. Heckman has been at the Department of Economics at the University of Chicago since 1973. He was one of the founders of the Harris School of Public Policy and has been a research fellow at the American Bar Foundation since 1991. He also holds an appointment at the Law School at the University of Chicago. In May 2014, he launched the Center for the Economics of Human Development at the University of Chicago. He currently directs this Center.

In 2000, Dr. Heckman shared the Nobel Prize in Economics for his work on the microeconometrics of diversity and heterogeneity and for establishing a sound causal basis for public policy evaluation. He has received numerous other awards for his work. He is currently co-editor of the Journal of Political Economy and has published over 300 articles and 9 books. His most recent book is The Myth of Achievement Tests: The GED and the Role of Character in American Life (University of Chicago Press, 2014).
PLENARY III: 2015 MAHBUB UL HAQ LECTURE:
Ernesto Zedillo, PhD – Yale University
5:15 PM – 6:15 PM
GASTON HALL

TALES FROM LATIN AMERICA AND AFRICA:
GROWING POLICY CHALLENGES AT A TIME OF VANISHING TAILWINDS.

This lecture will observe that the recent period of significant improvements in key social indicators in regions such as Latin America and Sub-Saharan Africa have been driven, not exclusively but certainly significantly, both by better terms of trade and by the adoption of unprecedentedly effective social policies –like the conditional cash transfers programs. It will argue that such improvements, in the absence of more ambitious structural reforms, could stall or even reverse now that the commodity super-cycle is over, and that the impact of the innovative social programs either have entered their diminishing returns phase, in some cases, or, in others, are at risk of being interrupted or at least dwindling for fiscal reasons.

Ernesto Zedillo, PhD – Director, Yale University Center for the Study of Diplomacy

Dr. Zedillo is the Frederick Iseman ’74 Director of the Yale Center for the Study of Globalization; Professor in the Field of International Economics and Politics; Professor of International and Area Studies; and Professor Adjunct of Forestry and Environmental Studies at Yale University. Dr. Zedillo served his country as President of Mexico from 1994–2000. He currently serves as the Chairman of the Board of the Natural Resource Governance Institute; the 21st Century Advisory Council of the Berggruen Institute on Governance; and Co-Chair of the Inter-American Dialogue. He also serves on the Global Commission on Drug Policy, chaired by Fernando Henrique Cardoso, and is a member of The Elders, an independent group of global leaders using their collective experience and influence for peace, justice and human rights worldwide.

Dr. Zedillo is currently a Member of the G30 and the Board of Directors of the Peterson Institute for International Economics. He is a Distinguished Practitioner of the Blavatnik School of Government at Oxford and in 2011 he was elected an international member of the American Philosophical Society. His edited volume, Rethinking the War on Drugs through the US-Mexico Prism (YCSG), was published in 2012 and two other edited volumes, Global Warming: Looking Beyond Kyoto (Brookings/YCSG) and The Future of Globalization: Explorations in Light of Recent Turbulence (Routledge) were published in 2008.
Professors Nussbaum and Sen have agreed to an extraordinary plenary session in which they will discuss one of the main issues on which their interpretations of the capability approach appear to diverge.

Martha Nussbaum, University of Chicago

Martha Nussbaum received her BA from NYU and her MA and PhD from Harvard. She has taught at Harvard University, Brown University, and Oxford University. From 1986 to 1993, Nussbaum was a research advisor at the World Institute for Development Economics Research, Helsinki, a part of the United Nations University. She has chaired the American Philosophical Association’s Committee on International Cooperation, the Committee on the Status of Women, and the Committee for Public Philosophy. From 1999 to 2000, she was one of the three Presidents of the Association, delivering the Presidential Address in the Central Division. She has received honorary degrees from fifty colleges and universities in the U.S., Canada, Latin America, Asia, Africa, and Europe, including Lawrence University, Williams College, the University of Athens (Greece), the University of St. Andrews (Scotland), the University of Edinburgh (Scotland), Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (Belgium), the University of Toronto, the Ecole Normale Supérieure (Paris), the New School University, the University of Haifa (Israel), Emory University, the University of Bielefeld (Germany), Ohio State University, Georgetown University, the University of the Free State (South Africa), and the Universidad Iberoamericana (Mexico). She received the Grawemeyer Award in Education in 2002, the Barnard College Medal of Distinction in 2003, the Radcliffe Alumnae Recognition Award in 2007, and the Centennial Medal of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Harvard University in 2010. She is an Academician in the Academy of Finland. In 2009 she won the ASK award from the German Social Science Research Council (WZB) for her contributions to “social system reform,” and the American Philosophical Society’s Henry M. Phillips Prize in Jurisprudence. In 2012 she was awarded the Prince of Asturias Prize in the Social Sciences.

Nussbaum is the Ernst Freund Distinguished Service Professor of Law and Ethics at the University of Chicago, appointed in the Law School and Philosophy Department. She is an Associate in the Classics Department, the Divinity School, and the Political Science Department, a Member of the Committee on Southern Asian Studies, and a Board Member of the Human Rights Program.

Amartya Sen, Harvard University

Amartya Sen is Thomas W. Lamont University Professor, and Professor of Economics and Philosophy, at Harvard University and was until 2004 the Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. He is also Senior Fellow at the Harvard Society of Fellows. Earlier on he was Professor of Economics at Jadavpur University Calcutta, the Delhi School of Economics, and the London School of Economics, and Drummond Professor of Political Economy at Oxford University.

Amartya Sen’s awards include Bharat Ratna (India); Commandeur de la Legion d’Honneur (France); the National Humanities Medal (USA); Ordem do Merito Cientifico (Brazil); Honorary Companion of Honour (UK); Aztec Eagle (Mexico); Edinburgh Medal (UK); the George Marshall Award (USA); the Eisenhauer Medal (USA); and the Nobel Prize in Economics.
International migration and development intersect in many ways. The development process affects whether and how people move across international borders; migration in turn affects the development of both source and destination countries. The importance of migration has been recognized in negotiations on the post-2015 development agenda. Transforming our World: The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development recognizes the positive contribution of migrants to inclusive growth and sustainable development. It also acknowledges that migrants can be highly vulnerable and specifically mentions the need for “full respect for human rights and the humane treatment of migrants regardless of migration status, of refugees and of displaced persons.” The document sets out specific targets for achieving these aims, including through facilitation “of orderly, safe, regular and responsible migration and mobility of people.” Moreover, goals relating to empowerment and education explicitly refer to migrants, refugees and displaced persons as populations of special concern.

In this session, four prominent experts in migration and development will discuss the interconnections between migration and development, its relevance to the post 2015 development agenda, and ways to enhance the human development and capabilities of migrants, their countries of origin and countries of destination.

MODERATOR:

PLENARY SESSIONS

PLENARY VI: 2015 MARTHA C. NUSSBAUM LECTURE:
Seyla Benhabib, PhD, Yale University
4:00 PM – 5:00 PM
GASTON HALL

DEMOCRATIC ITERATIONS AND COSMOPOLITAN HUMAN RIGHTS:
A NEW PARADIGM FOR THE DIALECTIC OF LAW AND POLITICS

This lecture examines the contemporary controversy concerning democratic sovereignty in a new age and under conditions of nascent legal cosmopolitanism. The lecture will contrast the mainly negative conclusions drawn by political theorists about the possibility of reconciling democratic sovereignty with a transnational legal order to the utopianism of contemporary legal scholarship that projects varieties of global constitutionalism with or without the state. The lecture will critique the “new sovereigntism” and argue that transnational human rights norms strengthen rather than weaken democratic sovereignty.

Seyla Benhabib, PhD
Eugene Meyer Professor of Political Science and Philosophy, Yale University

Seyla Benhabib, born in Istanbul, Turkey, is the Eugene Meyer Professor of Political Science and Philosophy at Yale University and was Director of its Program in Ethics, Politics and Economics from 2002 to 2008. Professor Benhabib is the recipient of the Ernst Bloch prize for 2009 (one of Germany’s most prestigious philosophical prizes) and of the Leopold Lucas Prize from the Theological Faculty of the University of Tübingen for 2012. She was the President of the Eastern Division of the American Philosophical Association in 2006-07 and has been a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences since 1995. She has previously taught at the New School for Social Research and Harvard Universities, where she was Professor of Government from 1993-2000 and Chair of Harvard’s Program on Social Studies from 1996-2000. A Guggenheim Fellowship recipient (2011-12), she has been research affiliate and senior scholar in many institutions in the US and in Europe such as Berlin’s Wissenschaftkolleg (2009).

Professor Benhabib has held many prestigious visiting professorships such as the Spinoza chair in Amsterdam (2001); the Gauss Lectures at Princeton (1998); the John Seeley Memorial Lectures (Cambridge University, 2002), the Tanner Lectures (Berkeley, 2004) and was the Catedra Ferrater Mora Distinguished Professor in Girona, Spain (Summer 2005).

She has been Adjunct Faculty in Law at the Yale Law School (2011; 2008; 2007); a Visiting Professor of Law at the University of Tel-Aviv’s Zvi Meitar Center for Advanced Legal Studies (2010) and is a Straus Fellow at NYU’s Straus Center for Advanced Studies in Law and Justice (2011-2012).
PLENARY VII: WORLD BANK PERSPECTIVES:
The Role of Governments and Markets in Promoting Mobility and Ending Poverty

10:00 AM – 11:30 AM
GASTON HALL

In 2013, the World Bank Group (WBG) declared two goals. The first goal is ending extreme poverty by 2030. This session will discuss the roles the government and the market will have to play to achieve this goal. What are the policies that can facilitate upward mobility among the poor? How much should we rely on growth and how much on targeted interventions? Empirical findings suggest that economic growth raises the incomes of the poor, but is that enough? On the second goal of shared prosperity, the WBG has begun to pay explicit attention to inequality, over and above extreme poverty.

World Bank researchers have been actively engaged in these questions and issues for several years. From the amassing of enormous amounts of data to analysis based on theory and latest econometric methods, many new insights have been gained. The session will highlight some of the ongoing research related to the above questions, and will also introduce the audience to the open questions and challenges which the WBG currently confronts.

MODERATOR:
Kaushik Basu, Chief Economist and Senior Vice President, World Bank

HDCA members from around the world were invited to submit notable facts that highlight the challenges and progress in promoting human development and capabilities worldwide.

THE FACTS BELOW ARE THE VERY BEST OF THOSE SUBMISSIONS.

30% of migrant children in Beijing receive no free public education.
(Huang, 2014). Submitted by: Dan Meng, Bo Luan, Shailaja Fennell

Every year at least 15 million people are forcibly evicted from their homes to make way for development programs worldwide. (Cernea and Mathur, 2008, Cited in UN-Habitat, 2011). Submitted by: Alexandre Apsan Frediani

Of the world's 16 million refugees and asylum seekers, 44% are children below the age of 18 and 47% are females.

As of 2013, about 40% of the hundreds of thousands of child soldiers involved in the world's conflicts were thought to be girls. (IRIN, 2013). Submitted by: Stacy J. Kosko

1.5 billion people, or half of the world's working population, work outside legal jurisdiction and without social protection. (Human Development Report 2014). Submitted by: Séverine Deneulin.

70% of people in multidimensional poverty live in middle-income countries.
(Global Multidimensional Poverty Index 2015). Submitted by: Sabina Alkire

80% of deaths from non-communicable diseases, such as cancer, diabetes, heart disease, occur in low- and middle-income countries. (World Health Organization). Submitted by: Jessica Wilkinson

8% of UK working-age adults have low capabilities in each of Nussbaum's ten categories. Half have a health problem.

77% of Bolivia's organic quinoa farmers regularly use indigenous knowledge and ceremony in their crop production.
(Stenn, 2015). Submitted by: Tamara Stenn

Human development is “the expansion of people’s freedoms to live long, healthy and creative lives; to advance other goals they have reason to value; and to engage actively in shaping development…”

- Human Development Report (2010, p.2)

“Our world is not a decent and minimally just world unless we have secured the ten [central] capabilities, up to an appropriate threshold level, to all the world’s people.”

- MARTHA C. NUSSBAUM
  Frontiers of Justice (2006, p. 70)

The capability approach “concentrates on the capabilities of people to do things—and the freedom to live lives—that they have reason to value.”

- AMARTYA K. SEN
  Development as Freedom (1999, p. 85)
