Ingrid Robeyns

HDCA President

Dear Conference delegates,

A very warm welcome to London, where this year's annual conference of the Human Development and Capability Association (HDCA) is being held. The HDCA fosters research and teaching around the ideas of human development and the capability approach, as well as their implications for policy and other forms of social change. Our members work in a broad range of disciplines – not just development studies, economics and philosophy, but also education, law, health, social policy, technology studies and many more. The annual conference is the highlight of our activities, and each year provides a unique opportunity for students, scholars and policy makers to present their work and learn about what others are doing, as well as to network globally. The conference is also an opportunity for pre-conference training events, for the HDCA thematic groups to meet and for the members of the HDCA Executive Council to interact with members.

We are very grateful to this year's conference organisers for putting together such an exciting program, and we hope you will all have a good time – at the intellectual as well as interpersonal level.

On behalf of the Executive Council,

Ingrid Robeyns
HDCA President

Connecting Capabilities: Conference overview

Elaine Unterhalter

Conference Chair

~~~~~

The theme for the Human Development and Capability Association (HDCA) 2019 Conference in London is Connecting Capabilities. We chose this because we think connection is an important capability that needs further consideration, and that rich insights could flow from explorations by the HDCA community of the idea of connecting capabilities. The topics we sketched in our initial Call for Papers have been extended and elaborated by the rich array of material to be presented at this year's conference.

A key motivation for our choice of the theme of connecting capabilities was a series of events over the last few years that have highlighted disconnection and brought home how fragile our connections might become. October 31st 2019 is the date currently scheduled for Brexit (the UK's withdrawal from the European Union), and views in the UK are deeply divided on this issue. In some ways, this is a peculiarly national political difficulty and time of uncertainty. But in other ways, Brexit reflects concerns that resonate internationally – not least the impact of globalisation and the emergence of greater xenophobia and more authoritarian forms of democracy in many parts of the world. The theme of connecting capabilities gives us an opportunity to think against this grain, using ideas and networks on human development and putting the capability approach to work in new ways. We hope this opportunity can be a valuable resource in an era when interlinked problems of scepticism of experts, post-truth politics and fake news threaten the stress on public reasoning and democratic dialogue, which are key features of the scholarly and policy work associated with human development and the capability approach. In putting together the conference programme, we have aimed to draw on conceptual discussion, empirical investigation, and critical reflection to help support the building of open, inclusive, equitable and solidaristic relationships in the face of conditions that drive separation and division.

Our Call for Papers invited contributions that would help us consider better ways of connecting capabilities as articulated by people in different places, shaped by spatial contexts, or as explored in a range of practices, such as research, policy and social action. An area of particular interest for us has been the ways in which one kind of capability, for example in education or work, might support others, for example in health, around equalities or any other area of capability expansion. We also invited work on connections between disciplines that draws on human development and the capability approach, and welcomed papers on connection as a particular form of capability, and on the capability for collective action as a particular formation of group capabilities. We have been especially interested in work that considers how the capability approach can help in thinking through some of the questions of connecting across social divisions of race, class, gender, age and nationality, as well as work on connecting across conventional academic/practice/social activist demarcations, and connecting educational processes with research and policy. Our attention has been drawn also to new research on spatiality, relational capabilities, decolonization, sustainability and the capability of connection, together with explorations of partnerships with civil society that draw on human development and the capability approach. This year's conference foregrounds the grave threats to the environment caused by the ways in which we use resources. A number of contributions highlight the consequences of this for people, and the ways it impacts on the poorest, while others emphasise the ways we need to understand our connection with animals and the natural world.

At this year's conference, we present a wide range of conversations, including 222 papers, 21 poster presentations, eleven roundtable discussions, including conversations among scholars or practitioners and scholars in dialogue, and six exciting plenaries with notable speakers. The conference follows three days of pre-conference events, which have included the summer school for doctoral candidates, events organised by thematic groups, and an imaginative pre-conference open programme, in which members of the local organising committee held discussions with UK based organisations on the methodologies they have used in putting the capability approach into practice, their experiences of this work, and their reflections on building coalitions and connecting organisations. During the conference sessions, work on the theme of connecting capabilities will be presented, together with ongoing scholarship on philosophical issues relating to human development and the capability approach, measurement, evaluation, human rights, gender equality, women's empowerment, technology, education, health, urban studies, sustainability and governance. This year, a number of new themes are also evident concerning the arts, care, forms of action against racism, and the SDG agenda. Presenters and the research being discussed come from a diverse range of countries and backgrounds spanning every continent. We are thus tremendously excited by the many ways in which the conference itself represents a very rich terrain for connection, and the possibilities the format we have used has offered for opening up dialogue across disciplines and perspectives .

The work of co-ordinating the conference has been supported by generous donations of time and money from individuals and organisations, and has built on a depth of experience of the HDCA over 15 years. I am enormously grateful to all our sponsors, the host organisations, and my own Centre for Education and International Development (CEID), department and university, UCL. Thank you to everyone who responded to the Call for Papers with so many interesting proposals, and to all those who peer reviewed abstracts and gave valuable feedback. A big thank you to the members of the two committees which have steered the conference planning. The programme committee has guided the focus of the conference, giving valuable advice and support throughout the year. The local committee has done the myriad tasks associated with the organisation in London, creatively shaping the pre-conference programme, and working with enthusiasm and skill on every detail of the three days of the main conference and the innovative form of the pre-conference. Thanks also to the HDCA Executive Council for all their support, and special appreciation to Kathy Rosenblum, the HDCA Administrator, and Ann Mitchell, who has the conference portfolio on the HDCA EC, for all their advice, expertise and encouragement.

We are extremely honoured to be celebrating 15 years of HDCA in London, and wish you all a wonderful conference. We hope you will have your own set of connected capabilities associated with the conference and that you will take away good ideas and many friendships to inspire and sustain you in the year ahead.

On behalf of the programme committee and the local committee

Session overviews

Full academic paper sessions
 Papers based on current scholarship grouped thematically. Three papers presented in each session, with sessions chaired by the third paper presenter. Questions will follow each paper, with an overview discussion at the close.
Thematic panel sessions
 Papers submitted as a whole panel under a single theme, with three to four papers per session. Some thematic panels showcase the work of thematic groups. See more on the thematic panel types on pages 47-49.
Author meets critics sessions
 During these sessions, an author presents a summary of a recent book and scholars in the field leading a critical discussion.
Practitioner and scholar dialogue
 These sessions consist of either a group of practitioners (social activists, policy makers, policy users) presenting a recent initiative in social engagement and a scholar working on the theme responding OR an author presenting a summary of a recent piece of work and a group of practitioners responding.
Roundtables
 Present discussions by policymakers, practitioners and researchers reviewing practical approaches with regard to connecting capabilities.
Poster presentation sessions
 These sessions are to showcase work in development. Posters will be on display throughout the conference in the Drama Studio, Elvin Hall. Poster presenters will be available to discuss their work in the poster session on Wednesday, 10:45 - 11:45. Details on pages 42-43.
Young scholars meets senior scholars
 In these sessions, graduate students present their research and senior scholars lead the discussion.

Special sessions

Meet the Editors
 Tuesday 09 | 08:00 – 09:00 | Elvin Hall, IOE

 This special session presents practical guidelines and common-sense suggestions for early career scholars on how to write and publish papers for international academic journals. The aim of the session is to share experiences that the panellists have, as authors, referees and editors of academic journals, on what should, and shouldn't be done to increase the chance that your work will be accepted for publication. Editors will describe how their peer review process works and what the main reasons are for rejection. Experienced authors will give guidance on how to choose the 'right' journal and adopt a publication strategy.

Chair | Enrica Chiappero

Editors:

 Tania Burchardt | Journal of Social Policy, Journal of Poverty and Social Justice
 Enrica Chiappero | Journal of Human Development and Capabilities
 Severine Deneulin | Oxford Development Studies
 Jasmine Gideo | Bulletin of Latin American Research
 Tristan McCowan | Compare
 Moses Oketch | International Journal of Educational Development
 Elaine Unterhalter | Comparative Education
We Are Movers Exhibition
 Ongoing throughout the conference | Drama Studio, IOE, Level 1

 This exhibition aims to challenge hostility and discrimination against migrants by offering new ways to see, feel and understand conditions of mobility and settlement. The exhibition was developed through a series of participatory, arts-based conversations intended to bridge academic research and lived experiences of migration.

 Project participants include staff and students from UCL and women and children from the Helen Bamber Foundation and the Lewisham Refugee and Migrant Network. The exhibition has been presented at the Migration Museum, Beyond Borders festival at Battersea Arts Centre and UCL.

About HDCA

The Human Development and Capability Association (HDCA) is a global community of academics and practitioners that seeks to build an intellectual community around the ideas of human development and the capability approach, and relate these ideas to the policy arena. The Association promotes research within many disciplines, ranging from economics to philosophy, development studies, health, education, law, government, sociology and more. Our members live in over 70 countries worldwide. The Association's main activities include the organisation of an annual international conference, the facilitation of a range of thematic groups, and the publication of the quarterly Journal of Human Development and Capabilities (JHDC). The HDCA website (<https://hd-ca.org/>) serves as a resource for educational materials and research, and to provide a forum for connecting with other researchers and practitioners engaged in similar pursuits. Much of the posted material is available to non-members who register on the site, but some materials, such as videos of lectures, conference papers and material under copyright, are available to members only. Membership includes benefits, such as annual subscription to the JHDC and the biannual Maitreyee E-bulletin, with in-depth focus on one human development-related topic in each issue.

HDCA members meeting is on:

Wednesday 11 | 13:15-14:15 | Logan Hall

Group overviews & meeting times

Children and Youth

This interdisciplinary network includes economists, social scientists, anthropologists, demographers, statisticians, philosophers and psychologists. It aims at developing a bottom up framework based on the capability approach to address theoretical and practical issues related to children's human development. We have organised numerous international meetings and workshops to stimulate debate on the capability approach and its theoretical and empirical applications in relation to children.

Monday 09 | 13.00-14.00 | Room 728

Education

The Capability and Education Network (CAEN) began meeting in 2003 and became the HDCA Education Thematic Group in 2005. It aims at promoting and supporting: i) the work of scholars, students and practitioners using the capability approach in the field of education; and ii) the work of the HDCA. The network is open to HDCA members and non-members to discuss work in progress and emerging new ideas, and it is a particularly useful forum for students, academics and practitioners to share their work with a wider audience. The Education thematic group provides an opportunity to share your own contributions to the field with fellow members and also to develop new national and international partnerships

Tuesday 10 | 13.00-14.00 | Room 728

Empowerment and Collective Capabilities

In recent years, a growing body of literature adopted the capability approach and sought to analyse its links to collective action, empowerment and community mobilisation. The aim of this group is to provide a forum for discussion among scholars, practitioners and also policy makers working on these issues. It enriches the intellectual debate on the multiple 'spaces' of human capabilities and seeks to extend the analysis of human capabilities from the individual to the collectivity, while at the same time accounting for the limitations that collectivities can pose to individual freedoms. This thematic group is meant to bring academics and practitioners together, in an attempt to exchange experiences in conceptualising and applying the capability approach on the collective/communal level. It will also promote research collaboration between academics and practitioners on policy relevant topics, such as empowerment.

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 784

Ethics and Development

This study group brings together a range of interested thinkers and practitioners concerned with ethics in both theoretical and applied forms. While the group engages with a wide range of topics relating to development – including culture and identity, democracy, environment, gender, justice, rights and poverty – it is also concerned with theoretical issues, such as the merits of alternative ethical theories. The group particularly promotes work by younger scholars.

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 790

Foundational Issues in the Capability Approach

This thematic group brings together researchers concerned with foundational conceptual issues in the development and capability theory and literature. It aims to provide a platform to support and promote foundational research within the HDCA community about important concepts in the capability approach, such as agency, freedom, evaluation, justice and wellbeing. The group encourages members to share questions, comments, working papers, bibliographic references and announcements of relevant events, such as conferences.

Health and Disability

This thematic group is a network of social scientists, physicians, public health practitioners, and philosophers interested in health and disability issues from a capability perspective. Through the past several conferences on the capability approach and now through our growing network of participants worldwide, group participants have begun to examine a number of issues at the nexus of health, disability and capability, including, but not exclusive to, questions of social justice, resource allocation, HIV/AIDS and antiretroviral therapy, reproductive health, impairment, disability and special needs, health system financing and access, capabilities and functionings, responsibility, disability and poverty, aging disability and income conversion, genetics, gender disparities and health, social determinants of health, and micro-credit participation and health

Monday 09 | 13.00-14.00 | Room 731

➤ Group overviews & meeting times

Horizontal Inequality

Inequality between culturally formed groups is a very important but often neglected dimension of development. A group's relative performance in economic, social and political dimensions is an important source of individual welfare. It could lead to serious political instability and can be the source of violent conflict. This thematic group aims to provide a network for those who would like to advance research of horizontal inequality and emphasise this serious dimension of development while looking at it from a variety of social sciences angles, including sociology, economics and political science.

Human Rights

This thematic group looks at poverty, human development and capabilities from a human rights-based perspective. Participants are working on theory and practice in areas such as rights-based approaches to poverty reduction, the right to development, economic and social rights, the right to participation and the rights to equality and non-discrimination in relation to poverty. This groups invites people from a variety of disciplines – social scientists, lawyers, public administrators, policy makers, educators and health professionals, among others – to join us in considering how we can learn from each other and work together to be more effective in realising human rights and eliminating poverty.

Human Security

Over 20 years ago, Mahbub ul-Haq drew global attention to the concept of human security in the United Nations Development Programme's 1994 Human Development Report, which aimed to influence the UN's 1995 World Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen. A human security (HS) analysis encompasses a people-centred, multi-disciplinary comprehension of security, and involves a variety of research fields, including development studies, sociology, economics, international relations, environmental studies, sociology, economics, international relations, environmental studies, and human rights. This thematic group aims to revive the interest of human security studies within the human development and capabilities paradigms, while pulling in other works that have been conducted in this area over the past 25 years. Additionally, it seeks to enrich the human security academic debate in human development circles by including new developments in sister fields such as humanitarian studies, feminist security studies and environmental change studies.

Indigenous Peoples

Indigenous peoples have historically been the poorest and most excluded populations in many parts of the world. They have suffered serious discriminations in terms of their basic rights to land, resources, language, culture, citizenship, access to basic services as well as the denial of essential conditions to lead a healthy and satisfying life. The main objective of this thematic group is to investigate how the capability approach can be applied in the context of indigenous issues. At the theoretical level, we intend to explore how the capability approach can be applied as a theoretical framework to analyse indigenous peoples' rights and wellbeing. At the practical level, we propose to investigate whether and to what extent the capability approach can contribute to further indigenous holistic concept of development in the design, implementation and evaluation of development policies. Our research activities aim to better understand and value capabilities that are shared by a social group or community.

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 736

Participatory Methods

This group hopes to create a space where ideas and experiences can be exchanged when using participatory methods to apply the capability approach. Members of the groups come from different backgrounds but with similar questions: how can use of participatory methods contribute to a better understanding of people's capabilities? Can we identify functionings and capabilities through participation? What kind of participatory activities can be used to capture the changes in capabilities? Should participatory methods be aimed at expanding people's capabilities? How do participatory methods impact on people's capabilities? Some of our initial objectives are: to identify and clarify some of the operational challenges of using participatory methods in a capability framework to illustrate how the real-life experiences of the poor – as depicted through participatory methods – could enrich our understanding of the actual dynamics of human capabilities and functionings, and to understand how participatory methods can contribute to the ongoing discussion of the relation between capabilities and structural conditions.

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 731

Sustainable Human Development

Over This thematic group encourages membership from all disciplines and practitioners involved in the complex issues relating to sustainability and human development. The group's interests include conceptual issues, transdisciplinarity, measurement, policy and practice.

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 780

Thematic Groups

Group overviews & meeting times

Quantitative Research Methods

This group is interested in quantitative research methods mainly to do with applied econometrics, but also work that relates to psychology and survey design. The principal aim is to highlight work using these methods and to provide a network of researchers who are willing and able to help with the design of capabilities-related research as well as the analysis of findings. The activities that we envisage at present are the construction of a list of capabilities researchers using applied econometric and other statistical techniques, a database of externally funded capabilities-related projects and their funding bodies, and an occasional informal get-together to share ideas as well as support and encourage capabilities researchers wanting to make grant applications to funding bodies

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 777

Technology, Innovation and Design

The design of products and services has profound and complex relationships with human capabilities. Many products and services – from technological to social innovations – are developed with the aim of expanding valuable freedoms and powers and have made important positive contributions. Other products and innovations are more questionable in capability terms. Thus there is need for careful ethical analysis to better understand the role of design, technology and innovation for human development. This analysis needs to be informed by better understanding of complex interactions of products and services, organisations and networks as well as institutions and cognitive frames. This requires contributions from many academic disciplines and must be set in the context of global dynamics. As research for human development, it calls for a transdisciplinary approach that includes non-academic partners for conducting research appropriately. This thematic group brings together researchers and practitioners of diverse disciplinary backgrounds for discussion, exchange of information and joint project development.

Tuesday 10 | 13.30-14.30 | Room 822

Conference Prizes

Wiebke Kuklys Prize

Best paper from a graduate student

The annual Wiebke Kuklys Prize was established to promote the work of graduate students in the field of human development and the capability approach. It is named in memory of Wiebke Kuklys who, as an economics PhD student at Cambridge University, advanced the capability approach by exploring the application of new statistical techniques. Wiebke studied in Germany, Chile and England, and combined an open mind for new ideas with a concern for the most vulnerable people.

She believed that high quality research could contribute to making the world a better place to live in. Wiebke died in June 2005 at the age of 33, only a few months after receiving her PhD degree. Her dissertation was published posthumously by Springer under the title 'Amartya Sen's Capability Approach: Theoretical Insights and Empirical Applications'. The Kuklys Prize will be awarded during the closing ceremony. This year's prize committee is coordinated by Professor Tania Burchardt (LSE), along with Professor Lorella Terzi (Roehampton) and Professor Des Gasper (Institute of Social Studies, The Hague).

UCL Grand Challenges

Best project for meaningful engagement between academics and practitioners

University College London (UCL) has established a prize to encourage work that takes forward the conference theme of connecting capabilities through partnerships between academics and practitioners. At the conference closing ceremony, two prizes will be awarded to projects that demonstrate meaningful engagement between academics and practitioners in using the capability approach and reflecting on the conference theme of connecting capabilities.

The prize committee is coordinated by Nina Quach (UCL), along with Dr Jasmine Gideon (Birkbeck), Dr Jonathan Gross (King's College London) and Dr Tom Pegram (UCL).

Networks & Dinner

Regional Networks

HDCA has six regional networks:

Francophone West Africa and Madagascar, Latin America, Asia-Pacific, South Asia, Southern Africa and North America. For contact details of regional network coordinators, please see:

<https://hd-ca.org/regional-networks>.

Meetings for all those interested in the work of the regional networks will take place on:

Tuesday 10 | 9:00-9:30 | Rooms in IOE as below:

Graduate Student Network

The Graduate Student Network (GSN) provides a platform for graduate students to further their work on themes related to human development and the capability approach, and to share knowledge and experience. Activities include sharing references and resources, facilitating theme-based discussions, exchanging research experiences and contributing to development of the HDCA.

The GSN will be meeting on::

Wednesday 11 | 11:45-12:30 | Elvin Hall

Conference Dinner

All delegates attending the conference are invited to the conference dinner on the evening of Tuesday 10th September at the Battlebridge Room, Kings' Place.

The venue is approximately 20-25 minutes' walk from the UCL Institute of Education (IOE). Volunteers will guide groups walking to King's Place immediately after the Plenary 5 lecture given by Professor Leif Wenar.

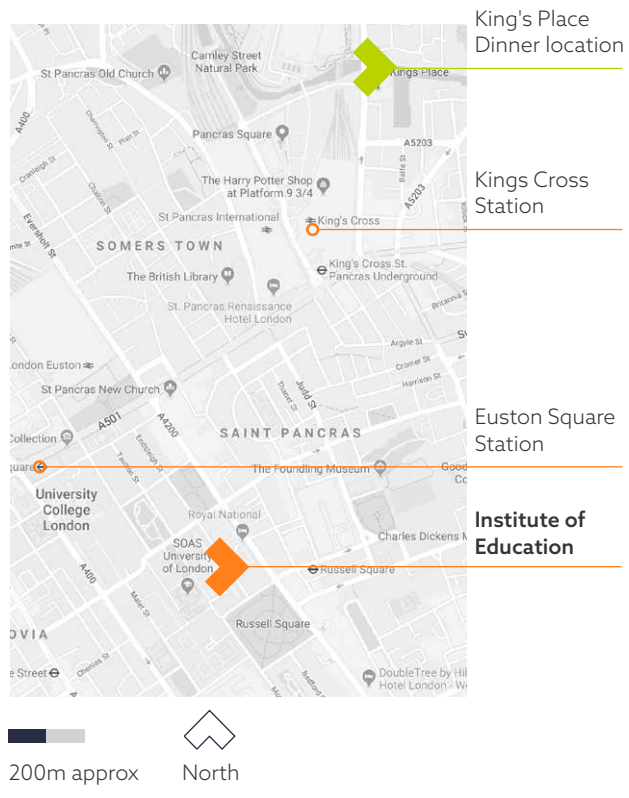

Please meet in the Level 4 IOE foyer, or make your own way to King's Place if you so wish.

We invite all delegates to walk wherever possible; for those who are not able to walk, transport will be provided. Coaches will depart from the IOE at 7pm. Coaches will return from the conference dinner venue to the IOE at 10pm.

Tuesday 10 | 19:30 | The Battlebridge Room, King's Place, 90 York Way, London, N1 9AG

A location map is provided below, or see for further details <https://www.kingsplace.co.uk> for further details

General Information

Registration

The registration desk is located on the Level 3 mezzanine at the IOE. The registration desk will be staffed each day of the conference from 8am. Advance registration will also be open on Sunday 8th September between 1-4pm.

Name badge

Please wear your registration badge at all times. All participants are required to wear an identification badge when attending sessions and when entering conference meetings. If you lose your badge, please go to the registration desk where a new badge will be made for you.

Lunch and refreshments

Coffee, tea and pastries will be served each morning from 8am in the Jeffery Hall, Crush Hall and Drama Studio. Lunch and refreshments will be served during the official breaks in Jeffery Hall and Crush Hall. If you have indicated you have special dietary requirements, you will find your lunch on the bar in Crush Hall.

Mobile phones and photography

As a courtesy to speakers and other participants, all mobile phones should be switched to silent before entering all plenaries and parallel sessions. Other electronic devices, such as cameras, laptops and tablets should have sound effects turned off.

Cloakroom

A staffed cloakroom is located by the registration desk on Level 3 of the main conference venue. The cloakroom will be open on each day of the conference, 9th -11th September, 8:30am-6.30pm.

Venue

Institute of Education (IOE)

The UCL Institute of Education (IOE) is situated in Central London in a prime position near Russell Square. The surrounding Bloomsbury Squares, which have literary and intellectual associations with the Bloomsbury Group, contain many other University of London buildings, and their gardens provide pleasant and peaceful refuges. The British Museum is also a short walk from the IOE.

UCL Institute of Education (IOE),
20 Bedford Way,
London, WC1H 0AL.

For directions to the main venue, see the IOE digital map: <https://www.ucl.ac.uk/maps/ioe>

All halls, theatres and rooms are located as signed, unless otherwise indicated. A map of theatres is provided overleaf. Please see the registration desk for enquiries.

Abstracts and digital programme

Abstracts and digital programme
Abstracts for all parallel session presentations and poster presentations are available to view in the online conference schedule here: <https://www.conftool.org/hdca2019/sessions.php>

Wifi

Wifi is available for conference participants throughout UCL. The Eduroam network is available to UCL staff and students, as well as members of many other UK and international institutions. You can join the Eduroam network using your own institutional login credentials.

If you are not on Eduroam, select the UCL Guest Network and open your browser. Use the event code HDCA2019 to set up your guest Wifi account. Details are also available at the registration desk and on posters around the venue on how to access the UCL Guest Network Wifi.

Connecting & networking

The Drama Studio on Level 1 will be available throughout the three days of the conference for delegates to meet one another, build connections and relax in. Tea and coffee will be available in the Drama Studio for delegates. The We Are Movers Exhibition will also be on display here throughout the three days of the conference (details on pages 15 & 19).

Amenities

Transport

Russell Square Tube station is 5 minutes walk from the IOE. Euston, Kings Cross and St Pancras Stations are all within 10 to 15 minutes walking distance. Numerous bus routes have stops close to the IOE.

For London transport information, see:

<https://tfl.gov.uk/>

Local amenities

The Brunswick is our nearest shopping centre. See more at:

<https://brunswick.co.uk>

Modern in design, and within a 5-minutes walk, it has a Waitrose supermarket, restaurants, boutiques and an art-house cinema. The surrounding streets are some of London's oldest and most charming.

Marchmont Street and Lambs Conduit Street brim with independent shops, booksellers, cafés and pubs. For things to do in Bloomsbury, including visits to small museums, theatres and churches see:
